Leicester, Massachusetts.

July 15. 1846.

To John B. Estlin Esq.

My dear Sir,

I am sure Mr. Garrison will need no formal introduction to you, nor will you, I am equally sure, to him. And I know it is unnecessary that I should ask for him, of you, such friendly courtesy as you are so well able to show, and which will be so acceptable to him. — Should he go to Bristol (as I fear from the shortness of his absence he will hardly be able to do) I trust he will see Mr. Armstrong and Mr. James. I presume he may find you in London. With sincere respect,

Yours,

Samuel May.
